Italeri Sends The Italian WWII Ariette Fighter To Our Shores

Model Rectifier Corporation is poised to launch another 100% new tooling, plastic model kit from Italeri's Culture of Modeling factory in Italy. The 1/48 scale Reggianne 2002 Ariette saw service with the Italian and German Air Forces during WWII. It was developed from the previous fighter, RE2000 as an attack plane. With an upgraded engine and increased weapons capability, it was extensively used by the Regia Aeronautica against the allied forces during the invasion of Sicily in 1943. Italeri pulled out all stops with this new kit; finely engraved, recessed panel lines, complete interiors, fully detailed engine, landing gear, crisp decal sets for Italy and Germany and more. Also included is a special artwork print, suitable for framing and Italeri's Photographic Reference Manual (PRM), with actual photos and drawings of the real aircraft. The PRM greatly enhances the ability of the modeler to produce a perfect 1/48 scale miniature.
